

Comment from Bruce Bubello

Totally unnecessary and an invasion of privacy. I do not need or want my car to tell anyone or any agency where it is. It is also not a very smart idea to allow any part of vehicle electronics to be able to talk to or receive from another car, any data. This could easily lead to problems like with computer viruses or someone / something taking over vehicle controls. It also presumes that I have or want a cellular plan or a data plan, which not everyone wants or has a need for or can afford to pay extra for. Vote down this invasion of privacy. It is bad enough now that just about where ever you go, some camera is watching you and in a lot of areas Automated License Plate Readers are watching you and selling your data to private companies or to insurance companies to determine driving habit.